

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

DOUBTLESS the Critical Pronouncing Dictionary of Mr. Walker is the best guide to a correct and elegant pronunciation of our language of which we can at present boast. It should not, however, be considered as a perfect standard of orthoëpy; for such it does not profess to be. Imperfection adheres to every work of man. The most finished productions of art, and the most successful works of genius, are not free from defect. The eminent orthoëpists who preceded Mr. Walker did much, but they also left much to be done. He has combined the results of their labours, and added to them the fruits of his own investigations. And, though he has not given to the world a faultless work, it is much to be doubted whether any lexicographer will ever approach nearer than he has done to the establishing a correct standard. Mr. Walker does not claim for his work the merit of originality; but, sensible of the assistance he had derived from the labours of others, in the preface to the first edition of his dictionary, he acknowledges his obligations to Mr. Elphinston, “who, by a deep investigation of the analogies of our tongue, has laid the foundation of a just and regular pronunciation;”—to Dr. Kenrick “for the improvement in which the words are divided into syllables as they are pronounced, and figures placed over the vowels, to indicate their different sounds;”—to Mr. Sheridan, “who not only divided the words into syllables, and placed figures over the vowels, as Dr. Kenrick had done, but, by spelling these syllables as they are pronounced, seemed to complete the idea of a Pronouncing Dictionary, and to leave but little expectation of future improvement ;”—and likewise to Mr. Nares, “ who, in his Elements of Orthoëpy, has shown a clearness of method and an extent of observation which deserve the highest encomiums. His Preface alone proves him an elegant writer, as well as a philosophical observer of language ; and his Alphabetical Index, referring near five thousand words to the rules for pronouncing them, is a new and useful method of treating the subject.”

Mr. Walker remarks, “ Thus I have ventured to give my opinion of my rivals and competitors. Perhaps it would have been policy in me to have been silent on this head, for fear of putting the Publick in mind that others have written on the subject as well as myself : but this is a narrow policy, which, under the colour of tenderness to others, is calculated to raise ourselves at their expense. A writer, who is conscious he deserves the attention of the Publick, must not only wish to be compared with those who have gone before him, but will promote the comparison, by informing his readers what others have done, and on what he founds his pretensions to a preference ; and if this be done with fairness and without acrimony, it can be no more inconsistent with modesty, than it is with honesty and plain dealing.

“ The work I have offered on the subject has, I hope, added something to the publick stock ; as I have endeavoured to unite the science of Mr. Elphinston, the method of Mr. Nares, and the general utility of Mr. Sheridan.”

To these may be added certain combinations of letters sometimes used in printing: as, fl, ff, fi, ffi, fl, and &, or and per se and, or, rather, et per se and;

fl, ff, fi, ffi, &.

Our letters, says Dr. Johnson, are commonly reckoned twenty-four, because anciently i and j, as well as u and v, were expressed by the same character; but, as these letters, which had always different powers, have now different forms, our alphabet may be properly said to consist of twenty-six letters.

In considering the sounds of these first principles of language, we find that some are so simple and unmixed, that there is nothing required but the opening of the mouth to make them understood, and to form different sounds; whence they have the names of vowels, or voices, or vocal sounds. On the contrary, we find that there are others, whose pronunciation depends on the particular application and use of every part of the mouth, as the teeth, the lips, the tongue, the palate, &c., which yet cannot make any one perfect sound but by their union with those vocal sounds; and these are called consonants, or letters sounding with other letters.

Definition of Vowels and Consonants.

Vowels are generally reckoned to be five in number; namely, a, e, i, o, u; y and w are called vowels when they end a syllable or word, and consonants when they begin one.

The definition of a vowel, as little liable to exception as any, seems to be the following: A vowel is a simple sound formed by a continued effusion of the breath, and a certain conformation of the mouth, without any alteration in the position, or any motion of the organs of speech, from the moment the vocal sound commences till it ends.

A consonant may be defined to be an interruption of the effusion of vocal sound, arising from the application of the organs of speech to each other.

Agreeably to this definition, vowels may be divided into two kinds, the simple and compound. The simple, a, e, o, are those which are formed by one conformation of the organs only; that is, the organs remain exactly in the same position at the end as at the beginning of the letter; whereas, in the compound vowels i and u, the organs alter their position before the letter is completely sounded; nay, these letters, when commencing a syllable, do not only require a different position of the organs in order to form them perfectly, but demand such an application of the tongue to the roof of the mouth, as is inconsistent with the nature of a pure vowel; for the first of these letters, i, when sounded alone, or ending a syllable with the accent upon it, is a real diphthong, composed of the sounds of a in father, and of e in the, exactly correspondent to the sound of the noun eye; and, when this letter com-commences a syllable, as in min-ion, pin-ion, &c., the sound of e, with which it terminates, is squeezed into a consonant sound, like the ee heard in queen, different from the simple sound of that letter in queen; and this squeezed sound in the commencing i makes it exactly similar to y in the same situation; which, by all grammarians, is acknowledged to be a consonant. The latter of these compound vowels, u, when initial, and not shortened by a consonant, commences with this squeezed sound of e, equivalent to the y, and ends with a sound given to oo in woo and coo, which makes its name in the alphabet exactly similar to the pronoun you. If, therefore, the common definition of a vowel be just, these two letters are so far from being simple vowels, that they may more properly be called semi-consonant diphthongs.

That y and w are consonants when they begin a word, and vowels when they end one, is generally acknowledged by the best grammarians; and yet Dr. Lowth has told us, that w is equivalent to oo; but, if this were the case, it would always admit of the particle an before it: for, though we have no word in the language which commences with these letters, we plainly perceive, that, if we had such a word, it would readily admit of an before it, and; consequently, that these letters are not equivalent to w. Thus we find, that the common opinion, with respect to the double capacity of these letters, is perfectly just.

Besides the vowels already mentioned, there is another simple vowel sound found under the oo in the words woo and coo; these letters have, in these two words, every property of a pure vowel; but when found in food, mood, &c., and in the word too, pronounced like the adjective two, here the oo has a squeezed sound, occasioned by contracting the mouth, so as to make the lips nearly touch each other; and this makes it, like the i and u, not so much a double vowel, as a sound between a vowel and a consonant.

Classification of Vowels and Consonants.

Vowels and consonants being thus defined, it will be necessary, in the next place, to arrange them into such classes as their similitudes and specific differences seem to require.

Letters, therefore, are naturally divisible into vowels and consonants

The vowels are a, e, i, o, u, and y and w when ending a syllable.

The consonants are b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, z, and y and w when beginning a syllable.

The vowels may be subdivided into such as are simple and pure, and into such as are compound and impure. The simple or pure vowels are such as require only one conformation of the organs to form them, and no motion in the organs while forming.

The compound or impure vowels are such as require more than one conformation of the organs to form them, and a motion in the organs while forming. These observations premised, we may call the following scheme

e	me-tre
o	no-ble

Consonants enumerated and distinguished into Classes.

The consonants are divisible into mutes, semi-vowels, and liquids.

The mutes are such as emit no sound without a vowel, as, b, p, t, d, k, and o and g hard.

The semi-vowels are such as emit a sound without the concurrence of a vowel, as f, v, s, z, x, g soft or j.

The liquids are such as flow into, or unite easily with the mutes, as l, m, n, r.

But, besides these, there is another classification of the consonants, of great importance to a just idea of the nature of the letters, and that is, into such as are sharp or flat, and simple or aspirated.

The sharp consonants are p, f, t, s, k, c hard.

The flat consonants are b, v, d, z, g hard.

The simple consonants are those which have always the sound of one letter, unmixed with others, as, b, p, f, v, k, g hard, and g soft, or j.

The mixed or aspirated consonants are those which have sometimes a hiss or aspiration joined with them, which mingles with the letter, and alters its sound, as t in motion, d in soldier, s in mission, and z in azure.

There is another distinction of consonants arising either from the seat of their formation, or from those organs which are chiefly employed in forming them. The best distinction of this kind seems to be that which divides them into labials, dentals, gutturals, and nasals.

The labials are b, p, f, v. The dentals are t, d, s, z, and soft g or j. The gutturals are k, q, c hard, and g hard. The nasals are m, n, and ng.

These several properties of the consonants may be exhibited at one view in the following table, which may be called

An Analogical Table of the Consonants.

Remarks on the Sound of the Vowels.

Every vowel has a long and a short sound: thus a is long in fate, paper, &c., but short in fat and marry, &c. But, besides these, a has also a broad sound, nearly approaching to that of the long broad o, as in war, wall, water, &c., and also a long hard sound, as in far, father, master, &c.

E has a long sound, as in me, metre, &c., and a short sound, as in met, let, &c. E, at the end of a monosyllable, and often at that of a polysyllable, and sometimes even at the end of a syllable in the middle of a word, serves only to lengthen the sound : when this is the case at the end of a word, it is commonly denominated e final. Examples : note, abate, lively. This, however, is far from being always the case ; for in native, crocodile, oppressive, and innumerable other words of similar terminations, the last syllable is short, and the e has no sound. In many words derived from the Greek, the e at the end is sounded, and, either with or without the preceding consonant, forms a syllable, as in ca-tas-tro-pher, and also in proper names borrowed from the same language : as, Can-da-ce, Pe-nel-o-pe.

The i has a long sound, as in pine, and a short sound, as in pin.

O has three long sounds, all of which are somewhat different from each other ; viz. the long open o, as in notice ; the long close o, as in move ; and the long broad o, as in nor, for, &c. ; which last is almost exactly the same sound as that of the long broad a in war, wall, &c. The short sound of the o is heard in not, got, &c.

The u has a long sound in tune, and a short one in tun.

Y, like all the other vowels, has a long and a short sound : the long sound is heard in the word try, and the short sound, resembling that of e, in duty.

Diphthongs and Triphthongs.

A diphthong is the union of two vowels in the same syllable. Diphthongs are divided into two classes, proper and improper.

Proper diphthongs are those in which both the vowels are sounded : as,

ai in aim ,	ie in bier ,	ey in they ,	ou in found ,
eu in feud ,	oi in voice ,	oo in moon ,	oy in boy .

Improper diphthongs are those in which only one of the vowels is sounded : as,

a in bear ,	pronounced bare ,	o in board ,	pronounced bord ;
e in beat ,	“ bete ;	u in blue ,	“ blu ;
i in build ,	“ bild ;	y in buy ,	“ by .

A triphthong is the union of three vowels in one syllable : as, eau in beau-ty, pronounced buty ; ieu in adieu, pronounced adu.

N. B. Our triphthongs being for the most part derived from the French several of them retain the sound which they have in their original language thus, beau, pronounced bo ; flambeau, pronounced flambo.

Remarks on the Consonants.

The observations which might be made on the consonants, as well as on the vowels, are so numerous, that it would be quite impossible to bring them within the limits of this small treatise, the plan of which admits of making such remarks only as are absolutely necessary.

B.

This letter is mute at the end of a word or syllable, when it is preceded by m, as in bomb, coxcomb, &c. : in comb it serves as e final to lengthen the syllable.

C.

C is sounded hard, like k, before a, o, and u : as, can, corn, cow, cup, pronounced kan, korn, kow, kup.

But c has a soft sound, like s, before e, i, and y : as, cell, cedar, cider, cymbal, pronounced sell, sedar, sider, sybal.

Ch.

Ch is sounded soft, as in church, in most words that are purely English ; but hard, like k, in a number of words derived from the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and particularly in proper names of persons and places mentioned in ancient history and geography ; as, Achan, Achilles, Anchises, Baruch, &c. Ch is sounded like k in archangel, but retains the soft sound in archbishop, cherubim, and a few others. Ch sounds like qu in choir and chorister, which are pronounced quire and quirister. Ch, in words borrowed from the French, has the sound of sh, as in capuchin, champaign, chevalier, pronounced capusheen, shampane, shevaleer.

D.

D, like t, to which it is nearly related, when it comes after the accent and is followed by the diphthong ie, io, ia, or eu, slides into gzh or the consonant j : thus soldier is universally and justly pronounced as if written sol-ger ; grandeur, gran-jeur ; and verdure, (where it must be remembered that u is a diphthong,) ver-jure ; and, for the same reason, education is elegantly pronounced ed-ju-cation. But duke and reduce, pronounced juke and rejuce where the accent is after the d, cannot be too much reprobated.

F.

F. There is a strong tendency to change the sound of this letter into that of v, in some words. It has its pure sound in often, off, &c. ; but, in the preposition of, it slides into its near relation v, as if written ov. But, when this preposition is in composition at the end of a word, the f becomes pure; thus, though we sound of, singly, ov, we pronounce it as if the f were double in whereof.

G.

G has the same sound as j before e and i, as in gem, gender, gelid, genius, pronounced jem, jender, jelid, jenius; but in many proper names, especially such as pertain to ancient history and geography, as Gergesenes, Gideon, &c., g is sounded hard before e and i; and also in several words purely English; as, gear, get, geese, gidly, gift, gild, gird, girl, give, &c., besides many others of a similar sound. G is not sounded in seraglio, bagnio, and intaglio, which are pronounced serallio, bannio, and intallio.

Gh.

Gh is sometimes sounded like g hard, as in ghost, ghastly, gherkin, pronounced gost, gastly, gerkin. Sometimes gh has the sound of f, or ff; as in cough, laugh, laughable, laughter, pronounced cof, laf, lafable, lafter: but gh very often is mute, and, consequently, the preceding vowel or diphthong is long, like e final; as in high, nigh, fight, right, pronounced hi, ni, fte, rite. The words of this description are numerous.

Gn.

Gn also serves to lengthen syllables in the same manner as gh and e final; as in sign, benign, condign, pronounced sine, benine, condine.

H.

H is not sounded in some words derived from the Latin; as, heir, hour, honest, honour, humour, with their compounds and derivatives; nor after r, as in rhyme, and catarrh, pronounced ryme, catar.

J.

J, as already observed, has the soft sound of g, as in jelly, joint, junction.

K.

K has always the same hard sound, as in kirk.

L is not sounded in walk, talk, calk, which are pronounced wauk, tauK, esuk; and the same pronunciation is to be observed in their compounds and derivatives. L is mute also in calm, half, and palm, and the a has the same sound as in father; but it is sounded in palmiferous, &c.

Neither the l nor the p is sounded in psalm, which is pronounced sam, the a having the same sound as in father; but the p only is mute, and the l is sounded in psalmist, psalmody, and other kindred words.

Both the o and the l are mute in could, should, and would, which are pronounced kud, shud, and wud; as also in couldst, shouldst, and wouldst, the u having the same sound as oo in wood.

M.

M is found before n in a few proper names of Greek origin, in which case it is not sounded; as, Mnason, Mnemosyne.

N.

N presents nothing particular in its sound or use, except what has been already observed under article gn.

P.

P is not sounded before s. See the remarks under L. But to the words there noticed may be added pseudo, signifying false or counterfeit, and which is only used as a prefix to some other word.

P is mute also before n, at the beginning of a few words borrowed from the Greek; as, pneumatick, pneumatical, and pneumatology. P has no sound before t. Pisan, a medical beverage, is pronounced tizan; ptyalism is subject to the same rule; and Ptolemy, the name of the kings of Egypt from the death of Alexander the Great to the reign of Cleopatra, is pronounced Tolemy.

Q.

Q has always u after it, and is pronounced k or kw; as, antique, pronounced anteek; and antiquity, which is pronounced antikwety.

R.

This letter is never silent, but its sound is sometimes transposed; as in centre, sceptre, mitre, spectre, pronounced center, scepter, miter, specter.

S.

S between two vowels is sometimes sounded like z; as in miser, comprise, cruise, criticise, &c., pronounced mizer, comprize, cruize, criticize; but in many words it preserves its common hissing sound, even between two vowels, as in abase, concise, precise, devise, &c. Some words ending in se have the s pronounced like z, to distinguish them from nouns of the same form, as,

Noun.	Verb.	Noun.	Verb.
rise	rise	use	uze

S is sounded like z when it denotes the genitive case or the plural number, as, the king's palace, pronounced the kingz palace; a congress of princes, pronounced a congress of princez. It is also sounded like z when it is followed by n, as in baptism, criticism, anglicism, paganism, pronounced bap-tizm, criticizm, anglicizm, paganizm. In some words s is mute, as in isle, island, viscount, pronounced ile, iland, vicount.

Sc.

When sc comes before e or i, either the s or the c loses its sound, as in scene, scythe, sceptre, science, pronounced sene, sithe, septre, sience. Both s and c, however, are sounded in sceptick, with its compounds and derivatives, like skeptick. Sc are sounded like sk before a, o, and u; as in scald, scold, scum, pronounced skald, skold, skum. But sc are often sounded like sh before a vowel, as in omniscient and omniscience, which are pronounced om-nish-e-ent and om-nish-e-ence.

Sch.

Sch are sounded like sk; as, scheme, school, scholar, pronounced skeme, skool, skolar, with their derivatives and compounds. In a very small number of words, both the c and the h are mute, as in schedule, schism, schismatick, schismatize, pronounced sedule, sizm, sizmatick, sizmatize.

T.

On t few particular remarks can be made, except that ti have almost invariably the sound of sh before a vowel; as, expatiate, propitiate, which are pronounced expasheate, propisheate. But the same letters keep their natural sound before vowels, as in Antioch, Antiochus, and other proper names of Grecian origin.

V.

V has always the same invariable sound.

W.

W has no sound before r. Thus, wring and wrong are pronounced ring and rong, and all words of a similar description require a similar pronunciation. It is also mute at the end of words, as follow, fellow, pronounced follo, follo.

X.

X begins no word in the English language ; but in words borrowed from the Greek, where it is initial, it has the sound of z, as in zerotes, zerodes, zyster, pronounced zerotes, zerodes, zyster ; and in many proper names belonging to the same language ; as, Xerxes, Xenophon, pronounced Zerkzes, Zenophon. X, at the end of English words, is sounded like ks, as in annex, complex, transfix, pronounced anneks, compleks, transfiks. X, in the middle of words, is also sounded like ks before a consonant, but like gs when followed by a vowel. Thus it has the sound of ks in excuse, expel, extend, extol, pronounced ekscuse, ekspel, ekstend, ekstol ; but is sounded like gs in exact, exalt, example, exert, pronounced egsact, egsalt, egsample, egsert. This general rule, however, admits of exceptions ; for x is sometimes sounded like ks before a vowel, as in exercise, exigence, exorcism, Exodus, pronounced ekscrcise, eksigence, eksorsizm, Eksodus.

Y.

Y is sounded like e at the end of words, except after f, p, and sometimes s, in which cases it has the sound of long i, as in qualify, occupy, prophecy, &c. In the middle of syllables, y is sounded like i ; as in chymist, chymistry, &c.

N. B. Y is sounded like e in prophecy.

Z.

The sound of z is somewhat similar to that of s, but less hissing.

ACCENT.

Accent is that stress of voice which is laid on one particular syllable in every word, preferably to the others of which it is composed.* It is therefore of the utmost importance that the accent be properly placed. Monosyllables have no accent. There is, also, in several words consisting of many syllables, a secondary accent, which contributes in no small degree to the distinctness, force and harmony of the pronunciation. This secondary accent is upon the first syllable in conversation, reservation, reconcilable, &c., while the principal accent is on the third. But, if proper attention be paid to the principal

* The accented syllable is always louder than the rest : but when it has the rising inflection, it is higher than the preceding, and lower than the succeeding syllable ; and when it has the falling inflection, it is pronounced higher as well as louder than the other syllables, either preceding or succeeding. The only exception to this rule is when the accent is on the last syllable of a word which has no emphasis, and which is the concluding word of a discourse.

accent, the secondary one will naturally force itself on the organs of speech by practice in reading and speaking. The principal accent, therefore, is that on which a correct pronunciation depends.
